FONTAINEBLEAU PARK SPLASH PAD

DEFINITION OF A COMMUNITY PARK

Community Parks are larger scale parks serving a greater catchment area which still offer the base recreational services of a Neighbourhood Park, but with a broader range of amenities including such items as splash pads, picnic shelters, accessible playgrounds and various sports fields. Such parks may also include a small arena, pool, community centre or library as an anchor facility. There are instances in the city where community parks can be associated more closely with a school to provide a joint cooperative use.

LOCATION KEY PLAN

FONTAINEBLEAU PARK

Commonly known as: Fontainebleau Park

Former/other names: Armstrong Park, Rivard Park

Location: 2960 Rivard Ave

Property acquired in 1967:

Acreage: 9.99

Official designation: Community Park

PARK HISTORY

The City expanded Rivard Park in 1970, after acquiring an adjoining parcel of land from the Canadian Mortgage and Housing Corporation. In 1994, it was renamed Fontainebleau Park in recognition of the subdivision in that area.

In 1999, an additional piece of land was acquired.

Today, it is a vibrant Community Park, featuring soccer, football, an accessible playground, a library and reading garden, a walking track, pathways and a toboggan hill for winter time use.
